

BRIEF PROJECT DESCRIPTION

TSI will establish a one billion dollar endowment fund to achieve the peaceful social, political, and economic transformation of the United States, and as a catalyst for global change. We seek an egalitarian social structure beyond that currently achieved in progressive societies such as Norway and Sweden. To accomplish this goal we will use the funds in two phases. In the first phase, TSI will recruit accomplished progressive scholars as researchers. Their mission will be to collaborate with activists connecting theory with action. Each scholar will partner with grassroots activist organizations (environmental, economic, political, etc.) and collaborate on an action plan to attain a goal shared by and coordinated with TSI. The scholars will also be expected to work closely with the activists themselves and use their expertise to assist activists who must be regarded as equals in the research. The goal of this phase is to organize and unite like-minded activist organizations with the guidance of TSI scholars so as to create a new mass social movement more far-reaching than even that of the civil rights movement. This new movement will be a revolutionary driving force for democratic reform and the end of moneyed and corporate influence over public policy.

In phase two, TSI will expand its resources by partnering with progressive governments and individuals to establish an innovative university with telecommunication capabilities. This new educational institution will crystallize and expand the effort to change society by recruiting and training a new generation of activists, scholars, and professionals free from the indoctrination prevalent at universities that function as a corporate and military annex.
